Book Review

The Fault in our Stars by John Green

Are you in love with... well... love?! If you are, then welcome to the club. I love YA romance books so much, it's basically all I read. I've read many books that make me feel so happy when the characters finally get together. Books can make you feel so many emotions, and The Fault In Our Stars will make you laugh, smile, cry, and so much more.

The Fault In Our Stars is the story of 16 year old protagonist Hazel Grace suffering from thyroid cancer. The disease makes it hard for her to breathe without her tank of oxygen that she takes along with her everywhere she goes. Hazel and a new boy she meets, Augustus Waters, who also suffers from cancer, travel all the way to Amsterdam to meet the author of her favorite book.

Hazel Grace is such a cool character because while she could literally die any day, any hour, any second of her life, yet she takes a 10 hour+ plane ride across the ocean from Indiana to Amsterdam, just to meet an author, who is definitely not like what she expected...

I love how courageous she is, because I'm not sure if I would be able to take such a big risk if I were in her shoes. This is just one of the several things about Hazel that makes her an inspiration.

There's also just the right amount of romance, which makes it even better. The relationship that forms between the two is so cute and wholesome. While their relationship doesn't start off too great, Augustus Waters turns out to be something Hazel could've never imagined based off of their first interaction.

This book teaches you the lesson of not letting anything stop you from reaching your dreams and goals. You have to take so many risks in order to achieve what you want, nothing will come easy. Now, that's just a brief summary, there's a lot more to it... and a very intriguing plot twist towards the end that will leave you feeling heartbroken. But you'll have to read to find out!!
